Continuing a rich legacy that encompasses all art forms, Artown is back for its 22nd year with a full month of events this July. Art exhibitions, dance performances, live concerts, and plays are just the tip of the iceberg for the annual festival where 70 percent of the events and performances are free, allowing locals to attend and experience as many events as they'd like. With a goal to "strengthen Reno's art industry, enhance our civic identity and national image, thereby creating a climate for the cultural and economic rebirth of our region," it's easy to see the driving mission in motion all around town.

CRAFT

TAKE A LOOK AT THE TAP LINE IN YOUR LOCAL PUB, RESTAURANT, OR EVEN FAVORITE CASINO BAR. IT IS NO LONGER DOMINATED BY THE INDUSTRIAL MONOLITHS OF AMERICAN LAGERS, BUT HAS BECOME A VIRTUAL ADVENTURE TO BE EXPLORED AND SAVORED ONE PINT GLASS AT A TIME.

That adventure took a while to take hold in Northern Nevada, but we have made up for lost time in recent years with nearly 20 brewers and brew pubs, and a solid cast of craft beer-centric pubs and restaurants that offer local, regional, and national small production of craft beers.

Reno and the surrounding environs celebrate local beers each spring with Reno Craft Beer Week, now in its third year and set for June 2-10, 2017. Reno Craft Beer Week promotes our area's thriving craft beer culture, enhances beer knowledge, and builds local beer appreciation.

beer Week

“Reno Craft Beer Week attracts beer tourism, fosters knowledge of our regional brewing heritage, and serves as a showcase for Northern Nevada’s breweries, restaurants, pubs, retailers, and other businesses with ties to the craft beer community,” said Kurt Hoge, Reno Craft Beer Week co-founder and owner of Reno Type.

“Craft beer lovers will have the opportunity to attend events ranging from beer dinners and food pairings, to beer walks and craft beer cocktail tastings,” Hoge said. “We hope to make this year’s RCBW better than ever with a wider variety of events, both geographically and thematically, throughout the week.”

Renocraftbeerweek.com will act as the central hub for activity planning, coordination, and communication for Reno Craft Beer Week. Participating businesses are responsible for planning and hosting their own events.

The week will kick off with the biggest little home brew competition Backwash on Friday, June 2, and close with the Nevada Craft Brewers Association CollaBREWation Festival in downtown Sparks on Saturday, June 10. The popular Reno Craft Beer Week Brewery Tour is set to return thanks to the new Reno Booze Bus.

Reno Craft Beer is a great platform for your beer escape, but how does one take the first step in the great beer adventure?

“Try, try and try,” said Chris Shanks, co-owner of The Depot on Fourth Street, the three-year-old restaurant/brewery in a neighborhood that is striving to brand itself as the Brewery District. “The craft beer industry is introducing styles and ideas that the larger companies simply can’t or won’t do. I also think people like to discover new things and products that are below the radar. The craft beer industry provides adults with an almost scavenger hunt-like experience.”

“Craft beer lovers will have the opportunity to attend events ranging from beer dinners and food pairings, to beer walks and craft beer cocktail tastings.”

Most brewpubs, breweries, or tap houses offer a menu of short pours known as tasters. Those in the know pick two to four styles, light to dark. Going through the whole lineup of beers might send your palate over the cliff.

“Sharing a taster makes a great date night. You sit and sample, compare notes, and have a little intelligent conversation around what you are drinking. It’s sort of like Match.com, but way better with beer,” Hoge said.

Those who are more prone to a beer-less date night may be surprised at the growing popularity of beer as a cocktail ingredient; it’s more than just a boilermaker.

“There’s a way to turn almost any quality beer into a cocktail,” said T. Duncan Mitchell, owner of Chapel Tavern, one the area’s early adapters to the craft beer craze. “Things like gose or berliner weisse work well because they carry a good level of acidity into the cocktail. The roast and sweetness of porters and stouts lend themselves to cocktails as well.”

One of Mitchell's warm-weather favorites is the Sidewalker, a cocktail created by Brooklyn Prime Meats. It combines apple brandy, apple cider vinegar, maple, and lemon, with Hefeweizen, a German-style wheat beer.

Reno's beer scene is also seeing more food and beer pairing events. The multitude of ingredients in beer, as compared to wine, offers a lot of options and surprising variations.

"If you're going to have a bright, crisp pilsner with your fish and chips, you haven't made the wrong decision. Seldom have I found a beer and food pairing that makes one or both taste bad," said Cameron Kelly, head brewer for Great Basin Brewing Co. "The same general concepts for wine pairings translate very well to beer. You probably don't want to drink a 13 percent alcohol Russian Imperial Stout, like our 412 Scytale Barrel-Aged Imperial Stout, with a citrus salad. IPAs love spicy food (they will taste a bit spicier), ambers pair well with nutty cheeses and fruit desserts, stouts stand up to barbeque and chocolate-rich desserts."

Northern Nevada's beer future is bright, and it's not only because we have a young and aggressive core of new brewers, but because we like eclectic, iconoclastic beers, evidenced by the rapid growth of Reno Craft Beer Week from 40 to more than 70 events.

NBC's America's Got Talent
Winner

MAT Franco

“I’d be in the lobby doing magic tricks, and it’d start with just one or two people at the snack bar and all of a sudden the next thing you know there are 50, 60, 70 people in the foyer area around this kid doing magic and card tricks.”

Winning Magic

Solely attributing magician Mat Franco’s success to winning NBC’s America’s Got Talent would be overlooking the two-plus decades of enthusiastic work the 29-year-old has put into shaping his craft and finding an aesthetic all his own.

The Las Vegas headliner’s love affair with magic started at the tender age of four after seeing the first of many magic specials on TV. Becoming a sponge, his education took shape by watching and re-watching videotapes of magicians and progressed when Franco started to put on his own performances during show-and-tell and anywhere else that he could muster up an audience.

He recalls stirring up trouble at his two older brothers’ wrestling matches with one of his impromptu shows.

continues

Before dazzling the judges and viewers of America's Got Talent and claiming victory as the only magician to win the competition and the $1 million prize, he furthered his career by studying business at the University of Rhode Island.

With a continued entrepreneurial spirit, Franco combined his love for magic and his new knowledge of marketing to create a career boot camp. Starting his own agency to book conference shows, he would sometimes perform about 200 shows a year over the course of four years nationwide, putting in industry dues by booking gigs, composing the contracts, working any paying show, and creating marketing strategies.

Finding his passion so early in life has given the East Coast native advantages that set the "millennial magician" – as he marketed himself during those college circuit years – apart from his contemporaries. His ease onstage allows room for spontaneity within each trick, which results in a style that brings fun and whimsy to every performance in contrast to the seriousness of traditional magic shows.

From the well-known AGT trick of making judge Mel B's iPhone disappear from plain sight, only to be found ringing in the cushion of an audience member's seat in Radio City Music Hall, to spooking college students by switching out the packaged instant noodle chicken flavor packet with a dollar from another college student's wallet, Franco creates relatable and captivating storylines that your brain will attempt to solve.

While the thoroughly conceived and inventive tricks vary in his Las Vegas show, Mat Franco – Magic Reinvented

Nightly, two constant aspects are the importance of narrative and the shared experience between the performer and the audience. This requires a different state of mind – or perhaps a lack of one – as the magician wants his audience to enjoy his sleight-of-hand and narrative-driven tricks the same way one would a movie, a departure from what most might be used to.

"When you watch a movie, you know it's fake and you know it's fictional, but you sit back and enjoy it. You're not worried about how the special effects are achieved, so I think it's the same thing in magic," he said. "I try to wrap my magical creations in stories and some sort of bigger scene that helps people dive into it the same way they would a movie or their favorite TV show."

Immerse yourself in lighthearted magic during a special version of the Las Vegas show, An Evening with Mat Franco Sunday, July 2, 2017 in the Tuscany Ballroom at the Peppermill. For more information and to purchase tickets, please visit PeppermillReno.com. ■

Art that tastes beautiful

ROMANZA BY PEPPERMILL

A scenic view of the Truckee River in Reno, Nevada. The river flows through a lush green landscape with tall grasses and trees in the foreground. In the background, a city skyline is visible, including a large, modern building with many balconies and a tall building with a "RENO" sign on top. Several people are seen tubing down the river. The word "four" is written in a large, white, cursive font across the middle of the image.

TRUCKEE RIVER

KAYAKING AND RAFTING

Located in downtown Reno, the Truckee River Whitewater Park is the ideal spot to paddle out in a kayak or as a group in a raft without the concern of major rapids. The man-made course is composed of eleven drop pools that range in difficulty over a half-mile stretch and includes a racing course and other obstacles if you're in the mood to get your heart rate up.

For a more remote and intense excursion, areas like the Truckee Fall, Bronco and Jaws Rapids, and Staircase Rapid located between Truckee, Verdi, and Reno offer Class III to IV rapids, but are best left for experienced paddlers.

Some companies in the area that offer professionally guided kayak tours include: Tahoe Whitewater Tours (10015 Palisade Drive, Truckee) and Sierra Adventures (11 N. Sierra Street, Suite 101, Reno) with tours starting at $68 and $99, respectively, which are great options that take the stress out of planning your kayaking daytrip – including renting equipment, scouting the locations, transportation to-and-from the river, and, in some cases, packing snacks. Since 1973, Truckee River Rafting (55 W. Lake Blvd., Tahoe City) has been offering guided rafting trips, ensuring a carefree half-day ride down the river with rates starting at $33. Tributary Whitewater Tours (meeting location 10068 Hirschdale Road, Truckee) offers a half-day rafting trip for $69 that leads group from Truckee to Reno.

TUBING AND SWIMMING

If appreciating the river in a relaxed, on-the-fly way is more your tempo, tubing and swimming are some ways locals favor soaking up vitamin D.

Floating on the river is part of becoming initiated as a Northern Nevadan. Even if you're a temporary resident, you're invited to join the floating community of tied inner-tubes steadily bobbing down the river. Before starting the descent downstream, you'll want to determine how much time you'd like to spend floating. For a three-hour journey, start at Mayberry Park (101 Woodland Ave., Reno) for a 5.5-mile ride, and head to Crissie Caughlin Park (3415 Idlewild Drive, Reno) for a 3-mile float that lasts about two hours. If you're looking to sneak in a shorter float, the Whitewater Park offers two channels that range in difficulty.

While you can float the river on almost any inflatable device, experienced floaters have found that river rocks make quick work of thinner plastic. If purchasing a sturdy inner tube is making you think twice about floating, Tahoe Whitewater Tours (400 Island Ave., Reno) offers the complete tubing experience with a shuttle ride, inner tube, helmets, life jackets, and a safety orientation for only $6 an hour.

Much like tubing, swimming allows you to easily spend time on the Truckee River without having to commit a majority of your day. The Whitewater Park is home to several different swimming areas within the half-mile distance and is perhaps the easiest swimming hole to find on the Truckee River. Other swimming spots are scattered across the Truckee River, but pinpointing specific spots can be difficult. The Truckee Meadows Water Authority's website recommends scouting areas first for rocks and current conditions because areas can vastly differ, and higher water levels make the rapids more intense. ■

Reno is known as many things to many people. To some, the Biggest Little City is the gateway to Lake Tahoe and Burning Man, while others consider it to be an up-and-coming technology hub that boasts Tesla, Switch, and an ever-growing list of industry leaders as residents. Spend an afternoon in the heart of the community though, and you’ll discover what those who call Reno home already know – the city is emerging as a public art mecca.

More than 175 murals, sculptures, and other art works can be found in downtown Reno and the Midtown District, with new pieces popping up literally overnight at times. The City of Reno has long been a supporter of these efforts, embracing the opportunity to make art accessible for everyone while simultaneously reducing blight and illegal tagging.

the Art of Reno

“Art is part of our culture and our identity,” said Geralda Miller, member of the Reno Arts and Culture Commission and co-owner of Art Spot Reno, a company that supports local arts and businesses by integrating them into the community. “We have a higher quality of life because of the city’s commitment to make these things part of our everyday experience.”

Started in 2013, Miller and co-owner Eric Brooks began Art Spot Reno with a mission to develop a more organized way for locals and tourists to view and learn about the city’s murals and public art. Visitors to their website will find a comprehensive arts events calendar, a searchable artist registry, and maps that pinpoint the current locations of Reno public art works. Perfect for solo or group exploration, these pieces have been organized into three distinct paths – the Midtown Mural Tour, the Playa Art Trail, and the Downtown Reno Mural and Public Art Tour.

These tours offer a glimpse into the contemporary art going on outside of museums and galleries,” said Eric Brooks. “They are culture in action.”

MIDTOWN MURAL TOUR

Reno’s Midtown District is home to boutique shops, five-star dining, and more than 80 murals painted by local, national, and international artists. The city is privileged to have major pieces on display from Nanook, Garrison Buxton, Andrea LaHue (aka Random Act), Labrona, and NDA, as well as Erik Burke/OverUnder and Joe C. Rock. Burke and Rock, who both currently live in Reno, have numerous murals throughout Midtown and downtown. Burke’s works are often signed “OU,” with his age at the time he painted each piece. Rock likes to incorporate crowns and the phrase “Freshness Guaranteed” into his art when he can.

While many of Midtown’s murals are visible from main streets, even more are tucked in alleyways and hidden in unlikely spots. The Art Spot Reno map can help guide you to them, or you can join a docent for group tours every second Saturday of the month for $10 per person. Tours are taken at a leisurely pace over roughly two hours, and knowledgeable guides provide stories and insight that make the art even more enjoyable. Every month, the Midtown Mural Tour alternates between a north route and south route, as there are too many pieces in just this neighborhood to be seen in a single afternoon.

“Believe” by Jeff Schomberg and Laura Kimpton

“There is a certain point, just after we have turned the halfway point on the south route, where the realization starts to set in – there is so much art to look at in such a small stretch of town,” said Miller. “I love that look.”

Folks are encouraged to take the Midtown Mural Tour over and over again, as murals come and go more often than one would believe. Permission is all that makes a public mural legal or illegal, and it is up to the owners of each building or property to decide if a current mural stays, gets replaced with a new piece, or is covered up by plain paint.

Whether you follow the Midtown Mural Tour with a guide or not, there is one particular piece Miller recommends everyone stop and see. Painted by Burke and Rock along the back wall of Junkee Clothing Exchange is “nevada,” an impressive mural that captures Nevada’s history through more than a dozen portraits of state icons. Mark Twain, Abraham Lincoln, Sarah Winnemucca, and more will be waiting for you.

PLAYA ART TRAIL

The Playa Art Trail gets its name from Burning Man, the world’s largest venue for interactive art installations held annually in Nevada’s Black Rock Desert. Made up of dry lake beds, this locale is also known as the playa, the Spanish word for “beach.”

“Reno is high on the cool factor because of its proximity to Burning Man...and the City of Reno was forward thinking enough to start purchasing major pieces of art coming back from the festival,” said Miller. “The Playa Art Trail allows locals and visitors to see the scope, scale, and detail of some of the work that goes to Burning Man.”

Unlike the Midtown Mural Tour, art seekers will want to travel by vehicle to visit all the Playa Art Trail sculptures. More than a dozen pieces are spread throughout the city and its neighboring suburbs, with the majority of the installations located in downtown Reno. The large-scale public art pieces are still accessible by foot, though, so it is recommended that visitors park and spend a few minutes with each work.

A newer addition to the Playa Art Trail is the Reno Playa Art Park, a temporary, outdoor collection of even more Burning Man works organized by The Gateway Project. A self-guided audio tour is available for the park’s pieces and artists, which invites guests to call and press a corresponding number on their cell phones to learn more about each installation. While the sculptures are not fully indestructible, adults and children are encouraged to interact with the pieces. Guests can sit, walk through or underneath, and play inside almost all the works on display.

Following the Playa Art Trail will allow you to fully experience the beauty of the Biggest Little City, taking you into parks, neighborhoods, and local museums. Make sure you venture into Sparks and peek inside The Generator, a 34,000 square-foot maker space where many Burning Man sculptures have come to life. You may even get to see this year’s playa pieces before they hit the road.

DOWNTOWN RENO MURAL AND PUBLIC ART TOUR

The iconic and historic Reno Arch isn't the only piece of art to see in downtown Reno. Much like Midtown, the city center contains a growing number of murals from highly respected artists who come from Reno, the U.S., and abroad. You can't help but encounter one of the more than 40 public art works when you are downtown, as they are often large-scale and hard to miss. The murals are also done in a wide range of styles, including graffiti lettering, illustration, landscapes, and realism portraits. Here, too, permission to paint murals on buildings and walls is key – make sure you photograph your favorites as there are no guarantees any mural will be here on your next visit.

The Downtown Reno Mural and Public Art Tour is a self-guided one, but docent tours can be arranged for groups of six or more at the same $10 per person rate as the Midtown Mural Tour. Not to worry, though, as the Art Spot Reno map provides stellar instructions for how to navigate the city blocks and find each mural. Along the way, keep an eye out for red and yellow Art Spot Reno flags on business doors or windows. These note that a variety of local art can be found inside for your viewing pleasure.

Outside of the tour, it is easy to see that downtown Reno has embraced public art. During Artown, a month-long arts-themed festival, Circus Circus Reno Hotel and Casino annually holds a Mural Marathon Competition where qualifying artists from around the country paint an original 14-foot-high by almost 20-foot-wide mural on the side of the property in just 24 hours. This year's challenge takes place July 15-16, 2017, and all the murals stay up until the following year's event.

The City of Reno also routinely holds Calls for Artists to submit painting designs to cover signal boxes, helping to beautify their locations.

A newer art celebration in the heart of the Biggest Little City is the Reno Sculpture Fest, a three-day event that takes over Virginia Street with more than 30 larger-than-life sculptures. A collaboration between Reno Art Works, Fresh Bakin', and a long list of contributors, volunteers, and supporters, the family-friendly festival is free to attend and always worth checking out. This year's Sculpture Fest takes place May 12-14, 2017.

For Miller and Brooks, the more public art that makes its home in this community, the better it is for everyone who lives, works, and plays here.

"Reno is an arts destination, and we have so much more coming on the horizon," said Brooks. "Be a part of the fun and creativity that makes Reno a fantastic place to be." ■

WHEN IT COMES TO BEER, RENO LOVES IT, BREWS IT, AND KNOWS WHERE TO DRINK IT. MEET THE TWO NEWEST BREWERIES JOINING THE MORE THAN A DOZEN CRAFT BREWERS ALREADY HERE, AS WELL AS THE LATEST PLACE TO SIP ALL THESE LOCAL CREATIONS.

LEAD DOG BREWING CO.

Lead Dog Brewing Co.

Opened to the public in January 2017, Lead Dog Brewing Co. is helmed by one of the country's youngest brewers. At just 22 years old, Ryan Gaumer is owner, operator, and head brewer of the new facility, located in the city's unofficial brewery district next to The Depot Craft Brewery Distillery. Gaumer, who grew up in Reno and attended Galena High School, brought his love of craft beer home to the Biggest Little City after graduating from Pepperdine University.

The brewery currently operates on a 15-barrel system, capable of producing 500 gallons of beer, with 13 taps. Those looking to imbibe will find classic styles readily available, including blonde and brown ales, IPAs, and stouts. Gaumer plans to experiment and introduce seasonal beers and styles along the way, too. Since opening, Lead Dog Brewing has released a Choconilla Stout with vanilla and chocolate flavors, a Golden Citrus Ale, and two IPAs – the New England IPA and the 50 Shades of RED IPA.

There is much more to come for Lead Dog Brewing Co., which has left itself plenty of room to grow in its renovated warehouse space. Visit the large, inviting tap room to try these tasty brews by the glass or growler, and stay for happy hour specials from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays or a game of shuffleboard. While there's no on-site kitchen, patrons are welcome to bring in food from nearby restaurants or grab a bite from local food trucks. You may even want to bring a dog treat or two for the furry friends you're likely to meet inside.

Lead Dog Brewing Co. is located at 415 E. 4th Street in Reno, and is open Monday through Wednesday from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m., Thursday from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m., Friday from 4 p.m. to 11 p.m., Saturday from noon to 11 p.m., and Sunday from noon to 6 p.m.

Revision Brewing Company is located at 380 S. Rock Boulevard in Sparks, and is open Monday through Friday from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from noon to 9 p.m.

Revision Brewing Company

It all started with a homebrewing kit. Back in 2009, Revision Brewing Company's founder Jeremy Warren was brewing beers out of his Reno garage and entering them in competitions under the name Knee Deep Brewing Company. It didn't take long for him to pursue his interest as a profession, and, with the help of an investor, Knee Deep became a full-fledged brewery out of Auburn, California. Now, Warren and Jeb Taylor – the first brewer he hired at Knee Deep – are combining their passion for brewing great beers at Revision.

IPA lovers may know the duo as the brewers behind Knee Deep's Hoptologist, which won first place honors over Russian River Brewing Company's Pliny the Elder at the Bistro 12th Annual Double IPA Festival in 2012. There's no shortage of IPAs at Revision, though, as four are already year-round tap staples. Try a flight of Revision IPA, Revision Double IPA, What What Double IPA, and Dr. Lupulin 3X IPA to taste hop mastery at work. And mastery it is – just 17 days after Revision's soft opening, the brewery's second-ever batch of Revision IPA won first place gold at this year's Bistro 20th Annual IPA Festival.

Aside from the brews, beer enthusiasts will love Revision's taproom. Guests can sit and sip in the enclosed side of the space or enjoy the indoor beer garden with views of the entire brewing process. If you aren't able to stay and have a pint in person, Revision has its beers packaged to go in 16 oz. cans and both 12 oz. and 22 oz. bottles. For food, there is a weekly rotation of local food trucks providing great eats.

Opened in May 2016, it is a gorgeous space to enjoy some of the 36 rotating brews that are on tap, and it offers a fully stocked cooler of bottles and cans of beer for sale. While Piñon Bottle doesn't have its own label, local Reno beers are always in stock and on tap, including options from Revision, The Depot, and Brasserie Saint James. Consider this place to be a great option for sampling a solid range of brews born right here in the Biggest Little City.

In addition to the local favorites, Piñon Bottle strives to make beer drinking even more fun with regular tap takeovers, beer tasting classes, and mystery tap nights. These events bring well-known regional breweries to town, and have previously featured Saint Archer Brewery, Green Flash Brewing Co., and Firestone Walker Brewing Company. Buffalo chicken: definitely something you'd expect while watching a sporting event. Not necessarily something you'd imagine in a sushi roll - but it's time to upgrade your Buffalo chicken wings to Buffalo chicken fins.

Oceano, the renowned seafood restaurant in Peppermill Resort Spa Casino, has just rolled out a contemporary sushi menu with a flair for the dramatic. Setting itself apart from other restaurants, the new menu features traditional favorites like Crystal Shrimp rolls, along with new creations like the Porky roll, composed of smoked pork belly, tempura green onions, pickle, BBQ aioli, and unagi sauce. These out-of-the-box offerings raise the bar for the Reno sushi community with creations guaranteed to be found only at Oceano.

The updated menu follows the striking remodel that Oceano underwent in 2016. The restaurant has gone from a neon aquarium to a bright and airy modern experience. The upgraded features include luxurious granite countertops from Brazil, state-of-the-art lighting complete with chandeliers, wall art with coral and sea artifacts, and a secluded private dining room, perfect for large groups. Two 25 foot wide, 6½ foot tall, high-resolution screens are mounted in the main dining room, showcasing the resort's Windows of the World video art. Currently on display is "The Best of the Natural World," produced by Peppermill Reno's in-house team, which features nature footage from all seven continents (complementing the menu's selection from the seven seas).

The new All You Can Eat sushi menu is the love child of Food and Beverage Director Daniel Duran and Executive Chef Mark Lund, and has been in the works for several months. With a vision of creating a contemporary sushi menu, the pair worked to invent dishes that set the restaurant apart from the flourishing local sushi scene.

"Sushi has been growing at a fast pace, especially in this town," said Duran. "With a growing demand for sushi and an influx of savvy consumers, we have been looking at how to offer more than what our competitors do in terms of quality and variety. We decided to do an overhaul of our sushi program and focus on specific areas like the type of rice we use, where we source our products, and expanding the variety of sushi that we offer. We doubled up on our sushi menu, especially the type of unique rolls, and expanded the operation in order to serve a much larger clientele."

The extensive menu provides something for everyone. For the vegetarian crowd, The Garden features marinated tofu, roasted peppers, cucumber, asparagus, yamagobo, avocado, and a shiitake mushroom glaze. The Lemon Chicken roll offers land lovers tempura chicken, tempura green onions, pickled cucumber, cilantro, Thai basil, lemon zest, sesame seeds, and lemon sauce.
